"The general federation is a joint body standing shoulder to shoulder, keeping step, ready to march forward to do its part in the world's workprepared for service.

Preparedness does not apply alone to guns and cannon, but to general equipment to do one's share in the great battle of life.

"So, the federation, three million strong in trained workers, is making itself felt more each day, in fighting and helping to overcome the dangers that threaten humanity and the welfare of our social system."

Tomorow will close the meeting of the federation and will be one of especial interest in its proceedings, since the blennial election of officers is scheduled for tomorrow morning.

Defines Politics.

"Politics, my friends, consists of something that you can almost ex-press in the formula, 'get together.' Try to understand what the common task is and all take part in it in the same spirit, because politics is nothing but a systematic attempt to keep the law adjusted to the real facts, keep the alw behind the real, handsome, helpful constructive forces of society, and you canot do that unless you understand society. You cannot understand society unless you understand the component parts, so that after all the formula, 'get together,' lies at the base of it all, and the first step is for the elements of soclety to understand one another, but is not all that is necessary. The next thing is that the elements of so-ciety should understand their comrelationship to the society of which they constitute a part. Chicago, Oct. 19.-President Wilson, speaking to a New Citizens' meeting here tonight, declared that foreignborn citizens of the United States should put their American allegiance above all others. He praised the ideals that bring new citizens to the United States and outlined his belief that in the determination of the future of the world after the present war America will play an important

During a strenuous twelve hours in Chicago, the president addressed a collection of women as "fellow citizens," upheld the principle of the eight-hour day and urged that Progressives of all parties work for a broader America.

A demonstration lasting more than five minutes greeted the president at a new citizens' meeting tonight. Men stood on chairs and cheered, waving their hats. The president stood and bowed again and again. The applause ended when a clergyman began an in-He delivered three speeches here

In a spycech before the Chicago Fress club, the president predicted the "beginning of" a renassiance of the sense of patriotic responsibilities and urged the development of progressiveness. Speaking before a gathering of women later, he urged more participation of women in the affairs of the nation, and at a meeting tonight of citizens he declared a united America. At his every appearance the president was cheered by throngs which packed the streets during his automobile rides from place to place and filled to capacity the halls in which he spoke. He stood in his auomobile while passing the crowds and smilingly waved his hat to the
